It seeks to inform students about how their degree can be used to aid in sustainable development. For example, on how mining can be used to create opportunities for a community in which they are able to sustain themselves. This sense of awareness is being achieved through seminars and talks given by young professional Geo-scientists who speak of their own experiences and hope to inspire students, the GfGD blog, cooperation with London based NGO's to organize week long placements, careers advice, fundraising campaigns and through relevant films/documentaries. In the near future, the GfGD aims to develop internationally by providing placement opportunities abroad.
